

Vedanta's Nand Ghar project rolls out digital e-learning modules for children in villages of UP, Rajasthan and Odisha

Wednesday, June 24, 2020. Vedanta Limited's, flagship project "Nand Ghar" has rolled out e-learning modules for home-schooling through WhatsApp groups across villages of Uttar Pradesh, Rajasthan and Odisha.

The e-learning modules consists of stories, games, rhymes, home based activities, moral science lessons and more for children below six years of age. ICDS, Government of Rajasthan issued an order to roll out Nand Ghar e-content along with UNICEF e-content for children of all 60,000+ Anganwadi centres reaching out to more than 12 lac children in the state.

Complimenting Vedanta on this initiative, Dr. K. K. Pathak, Secretary, Women and Child Development Department, Govt. of Rajasthan, said, "Amidst the pandemic, with curtailed classroom education, e-learning has come to the forefront across the world. I'm delighted that WCD, ICDS Rajasthan has been successfully imparting education across 60,000+ anganwadis through e-learning. This has been possible with the joint efforts of Vedanta and UNICEF who have provided the much needed support. From creation of e-learning content to on ground delivery, Vedanta's contribution in this initiative is highly appreciable."

At a juncture of a changing era, this initiative has proved to be a game changer. It has opened a window of possibility, where-in Education is being made available and accessible to every child of around thousands of villages in India.

Speaking on the initiative, Mr. Anil Agarwal, Chairman - Vedanta Resources, said, "The spread of Covid-19 pandemic leading to closure of schools and colleges has affected billions of children and youth worldwide. The higher income families have access to technology and internet, however it is the lower income families that are bearing the brunt of the unprecedented pandemic. With the Anganwadi centres closed at this point, the need for uninterrupted education of children remains our priority. Thus, with an objective that no child is bereft of education, Nand Ghar has launched its e-learning modules through mobile phones reaching all Nand Ghar villages. This is a step on our part to bridge the gap and make sure that digital self-learning becomes an unlimited resource to all"

Vedanta has constructed two Nand Ghars each in the state of Goa and Karnataka. Appreciating Vedanta for this initiative, Mrs. Bharati Shettar, Deputy Director of Women and Child Development (WCD), Dharwad District said, "The Nandghar project at Dharwad district has been implemented very well, it brings me much pride that our Anganwadi children will be able to learn from a state of the art infrastructure that is equipped with solar panels, spacious kitchen and classroom. The unique feature of these Nandghars is that they have some innovative education material such as digitized forums and interactive software that will make learning fun for the children."

Vedanta project Nand Ghar has already constructed more than 1300 Nand Ghars across 7 states in India. The Nand Ghars are equipped with televisions for e-learning, solar panels for reliable power, safe drinking water, clean toilets and have emerged as an ideal model for replication in other parts of the country. The project aims to transform lives of 8.5 crore children through 14 lakh anganwadis across the country.

The core services provided at Nand Ghars are pre-school education to children (3-6 years) through e-learning, BaLA designs and smart kits, nutrition through pre-packed hot cooked meals to children, pregnant and lactating women, healthcare through Mobile Health Van and support to Community Health Centre, women empowerment through skill, credit linkage and entrepreneurship development.
